Sean focuses her practice on insurance coverage, bad faith defense, and appellate litigation. She represents insurers in complex coverage disputes, bad faith litigation, and declaratory judgment actions in state and federal courts. Sean regularly analyzes coverage issues arising under a variety of insurance policies and advises insurers regarding their rights, obligations, and potential exposure. Her experience includes drafting coverage opinions, litigating disputes involving first- and third-party claims, and developing appellate strategies in high-stakes matters. She has also prepared appellate briefs and petitions for interlocutory and discretionary review before state and federal appellate courts.

Prior to entering private practice, Sean served as Staff Attorney to Chief Justice John D. Minton, Jr. of the Kentucky Supreme Court. In that role, she researched and analyzed complex legal issues, drafted memoranda and judicial opinions, and advised the Court on matters involving a broad range of substantive and procedural questions. She also attended oral arguments and court conferences, providing her with valuable insight into appellate advocacy, judicial decision-making, and the development of legal precedent. Her experience at the state's highest court informs her approach to litigation strategy, legal analysis, and written advocacy.

When she is not advising clients, Sean is likely doing the New York Times crossword puzzle.
