Jasmine focuses her practice on advising school districts, townships, and municipalities on labor and employment and general governance matters. As a former school administrator, Jasmine has first-hand experience with addressing the complex issues that public entities face. She serves clients daily by assisting with collective bargaining negotiations, labor grievances and arbitrations, unfair labor practice charges, contract review, discrimination and misconduct investigations, policy review, and employee discipline. She also helps clients navigate ethics laws as well as public record and open meeting requirements. In her school practice, Jasmine conducts a variety of trainings for staff on topics such as Title IX and special education. Jasmine's commitment to public service and advocacy fuels her passion for aiding her clients and creating solutions to meet their unique needs.

In her free time, Jasmine enjoys traveling with her husband.
