As the Lobbying & Public Policy practice group co-leader, Trey Grayson is known as a problem solver and collaborative leader who works with his clients at the local, state and national levels to successfully navigate their government, legal, political, and regulatory challenges. Nationally, Trey serves as a trusted expert on election administration for corporations, associations, legislators, news media, voters, and election administrators at all levels.

In Kentucky, Trey is well-regarded for his objective and informed political and policy acumen. He regularly appears on Kentucky Education Television (KET), including serving as an in-studio analyst for KET's election coverage and providing monthly political insights on Kentucky Edition.

Trey has strong ties to the Northern Kentucky/Greater Cincinnati region and is very active in civic and charitable organizations. Trey and his wife, Nancy, reside in Boone County, Kentucky, and have two daughters, Alex and Kate.

Trey is admitted to practice law in Kentucky and Ohio only, and he will practice under the supervision of D.C. Bar members.

Trey's Relevant Experience

Kentucky Government Relations Work

Trey has successfully represented dozens before the Kentucky General Assembly and Executive Branch to address challenges in areas such as broadband, budget, criminal justice, education, elections, entertainment, finance, health care, hemp, insurance, taxation, trade, and transportation.

In addition, he has engaged with state and local government officials to assist clients with a wide variety of economic development projects including health care, energy, real estate, riverports, taxation, and public-private partnerships (P3).

During the COVID-19 pandemic, Trey served as a member of the FBT Coronavirus Response Team, and helped FBT clients understand and navigate government reopening guidance.

Election Administration

Trey served two terms as Kentucky's Secretary of State. The youngest secretary of state in the country at the time of his election, he served as President of the National Association of Secretaries of State and the Chair of the Republican Association of Secretaries of State.

Trey continues to be recognized as a national leader in election administration, and is often called upon to advise state legislatures, state and local election administrators, stakeholder groups, and businesses across the country. In addition, he regularly authors opinion pieces for publication in such outlets as the Economist and New York Times, and is sought out by members of the press for his insightful, non-partisan understanding of election issues.

As a result, he has been asked to assist several government and non-profit efforts to improve election administration, including serving on the bipartisan Presidential Commission on Election Administration. He is a founding board member of the Center for Election Innovation and Research and works with several additional organizations, including the Secure Elections Project, the National Task Force on Election Crises, and National Council on Election Integrity. He also serves on the advisory boards for States United Democracy Center, Issue One, the Election Official Legal Defense Network, the Safeguarding Democracy Project, and the National Institute for Civil Discourse.

Other Info About Trey

Work History

Trey served as the Director of Harvard University's Institute of Politics from 2011-2014, becoming deeply engaged on campus, including service as a freshman academic adviser and faculty fellow of the men's basketball team.

Trey is a former president and CEO of the Northern Kentucky Chamber of Commerce for three years. At the Chamber, he was a recognized leader in workforce and regional collaboration.

Before entering politics, he practiced with the law firms of Greenebaum Doll & McDonald and Keating, Muething & Klekamp, focusing on estate planning and administration, real estate, small businesses and taxation.
