Construction Attorney Daniel Edwards Joins Frost Brown Todd Columbus

Frost Brown Todd (FBT) announces that Daniel (Dan) F. Edwards has joined the firm's Columbus office and Construction Law Practice Group. Edwards represents contractors, subcontractors, design professionals, owners, and sureties in all aspects of construction. He has successfully prosecuted and defended complex construction claims involving delay, inefficiency, changes, and defective work. Before entering private practice, Edwards served in the United States Air Force as a government contracts trial attorney. His practice continues to include substantial matters involving federal government contracting in industries such as manufacturing, telecommunications, distribution, construction, and services. He is a frequent lecturer and author on topics related to construction law.

Edwards attended Miami University, where he earned a B.S. in 1989. He received his J.D. from Georgetown University Law Center in 1992.
