Judge Rice Dismisses CERCLA Claims against Coca-Cola

Mar 25, 2013

Categories:

Experience

Authors:

Stephen N. Haughey

On February 8, 2013, the U.S. District Court in Dayton, OH dismissed CERCLA cost-recovery and contribution claims brought by group of companies against Frost Brown Todd client Coca-Cola and some other defendants. Judge Walter Rice ruled that the contribution claims were time-barred, and that the plaintiffs' administrative settlement with EPA did not give them the right to assert a separate cost-recovery claim. Environmental attorney Steve Haughey represented Coca-Cola in the case with assistance from Jennifer Maynard. Steve represents industry across the Midwest in litigation relating to contaminated properties, landfills, and clean-up obligations.

© 2026 FBT Gibbons LLP. May be considered attorney advertising in some jurisdictions.

2026 FBT Gibbons LLP. All rights reserved. ADVERTISING MATERIAL.