Joins Labor and Employment Practice Group

Frost Brown Todd's (FBT) Charleston office continues to expand its services with the addition of labor and employment attorney Katherine Capito. She will be the first attorney whose primary focus involves assisting small to large businesses with their employment issues. Capito previously served as a partner at a private firm. A graduate of Washington and Lee College of Law, her experience includes handling internal investigations and litigation related to employment claims, contract disputes and criminal charges.

"Expanding our firm's labor and employment team in Charleston with the talents of Katie is one more step in an effort to provide area-businesses with the best service possible," says Charleston Member-in-Charge Carte Goodwin. "She has experience in nearly every area of labor and employment for a variety of industries that affect our community, including healthcare, finance and energy. We are excited to have her on our team."

Capito joins more than 50 attorneys across the firm's 13 markets and nine states who counsel the country's leading companies on employee and union matters. FBT's practice has a top tier ranking and a positive reputation with both clients and the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission.
