While the FDA continues to delay action regarding regulation of CBD consumable products, lawmakers continue to approach the issue from a policy perspective. Jonathan Miller, Member-in-Charge of Frost Brown Todd's Washington, DC Office and General Counsel to the U.S. Hemp Roundtable, the industry's leading business advocacy organization, and Kimera Hall, Frost Brown Todd Member and Diversity & Inclusion Committee Chair, present on policy updates surrounding the regulation of CBD consumable products. They also provide an overview on possible regulatory pathways and what may be required of manufacturers once a pathway is promulgated.
