Frost Brown Todd Charleston, WV Office Adds Seasoned Appellate Attorney Mary Claire Davis

Former U.S. Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit law clerk Mary Claire Davis is the newest attorney in Frost Brown Todd's (FBT) Charleston, WV office. Davis spent nearly 13 years working with federal courts. During her time working with Fourth Circuit judges Robert B. King and Stephanie D. Thacker, she assisted with at least 175 federal appeals. Davis has also clerked for the U.S. District Court of the Southern District of West Virginia and served as the Southern District's first Criminal Justice Act supervising attorney.

"Mary Claire brings unparalleled experience to FBT, as well as a sterling reputation with the bench and bar throughout our state and the Fourth Circuit," said Charleston Member-in-Charge Carte Goodwin. "Mary Claire brings additional depth to our strong group of appellate attorneys and litigators and we look forward to utilizing her talents to represent our clients in West Virginia and across our entire footprint."

Davis is a graduate of West Virginia University College of Law. During that time, she was Editor-in-Chief of the West Virginia Law Review, selected to Order of the Coif and Named Outstanding Student by the National Association for Women Lawyers. Currently, she teaches Appellate Advocacy there as an adjunct professor.
